New Plan Tightens Borders

Terrorism policy to require passport for re-entering U.S.

WASHINGTON | Americans traveling to Canada and Mexico would need passports to come home to the United States under guidelines proposed Tuesday in the latest effort to deter terrorists from entering the country.

The new rules, which would be phased in by 2008, apply to Americans traveling from Canada, Mexico, Bermuda, the Caribbean and Panama. They also apply to citizens from those countries who want to enter the U.S.

The regulations mark a dramatic shift from a policy that allows Americans to return home from neighboring countries without a passport. They also raise the potential of hampering tourism and commercial traffic with the United States' two immediate neighbors.

Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice said U.S. officials have been working with their international counterparts "for some time" to shore up security measures without crimping the flow of commerce across borders.

"It's part of the recognition that in 2001, when Sept. 11 happened — and frankly before that, when you think about the millennium plot in 1999 — these were borders that I think no one could call secure," Rice said.

Canada was deeply embarrassed by the millennium terrorist plot, when U.S. customs caught a man with explosives trying to enter Washington state from Canada in December 1999. LARA JAKES JORDAN (AP)

Wrong Kind of Shell

A woman kept her 5-year-old daughter at a safe distance Saturday as she walked "slowly and gently" to a police station in Golspie, Scotland, while holding a live hand grenade, the Glasgow Herald reported. The two were looking for stones and shells on the beach when Sandra Hinder, 41, found the device in the sand. She recognized the grenade from World War II movies, she said. As the station was only about 300 feet away and she was already holding the device, she decided to walk it over. The station was immediately evacuated. Later, bomb experts found the grenade active with pin intact, and destroyed it. Police said she should have marked the device's spot and gone for help, rather than picking up and carrying the live grenade. (EXPRESS)

WALLETS

Young License Photo Was Depressing

Twenty years after losing her wallet, along with $177 and her Social Security card, Lisa Tonks finally has it back. Tonks lost the wallet during a 1985 family trip to Jackson, Wyo., and Yellowstone National Park. The wallet was turned over to police, but without more information and because the case was considered minor, it collected dust on a shelf along with other old evidence. Jackson police technician Tom Turcol reopened the case using a police computer network and traced the Social Security number to Tonks, of Peru, Ind. "She was quite surprised," Turcol said. (AP)

Hanging Around

It's a new fad, and everyone's hooked. From wary beginners to experienced aficionados, more than a hundred people did a little body suspension this past weekend at the Suspension Convention in Providence, R.I. The three-day event, held in an old textile mill, gave participants the chance — for a $100 fee — to have their skin pierced with 3-inch steel fishhooks, then be hoisted up in the air and swung around if they pleased, Reuters reported. There's a variety of hanging poses to choose from; this guy, shown here with his girlfriend, opted for the "Superman." (EXPRESS)

HAIR

The Tail End

Some horses in central Wisconsin may still be bright-eyed, but no longer bushy-tailed: Sheriff's departments are trying to figure out who is cutting off horses' tails. Someone removed parts of the same horse's tail about four times since January at Town of Leon, officials said. In Eau Claire, police are investigating the theft of the tails of four show horses. The owners said the horses were all in pastures when the crimes occurred, and described them as "friendly." One sheriff's office is even offering a cash reward. Portage County authorities said the culprits may be after horse hair, which is sometimes used for making jewelry, watchbands or belts, and can be expensive to buy. (AP)

Officials Urge Patriot Act Renewal

Gonzales, Mueller ask Congress to extend provisions set to expire

WASHINGTON | The Bush administration has used the Patriot Act's powers to listen to cell phone conversations and examine business records 84 times in 3½ years, Attorney General Alberto Gonzales said Tuesday as Congress began considering whether to renew those powers and other sections of the anti-terror law.

Gonzales and FBI Director Robert Mueller urged lawmakers to make permanent all 15 expiring provisions of the law, some of which have aroused civil liberties concerns. Mueller also asked lawmakers to expand the bureau's ability to obtain records in terrorism cases without first asking a judge or grand jury.

Several lawmakers are introducing legislation Wednesday to curb major parts of the Patriot Act. Their bill would limit so-called "roving wiretaps" that allow authorities to monitor a suspect's cell phones and would raise the standard of proof the government has to meet before getting secret warrants to examine business records.

Gonzales told lawmakers some provisions have been invoked sparingly since the Patriot Act became law in October 2001.

The government has never used the provision permitting secret warrants for "books, records, papers, documents and other items" to obtain library, bookstore, or other records, he said. MARK SHERMAN (AP)

Jury Hears Shower Testimony

SANTA MARIA, CALIF. | Michael Jackson's former maid testified Tuesday at his molestation trial that she found the singer showering with a boy who often slept in the pop star's bed.

The woman, who was Jackson's personal maid for about five years, told of seeing Jackson in the shower with a boy about 8 years old who frequently stayed at Neverland and slept in the singer's bed.

The woman said she saw their clothes on the floor outside the shower but retreated because she thought Jackson would be mad if he found her there.

Under cross-examination, she acknowledged that people would often hang out on Jackson's bed and watch TV, and that she even served guests food there.

ABC's Jennings Has Lung Cancer

NEW YORK | TV news anchor Peter Jennings, who revealed he has lung cancer Tuesday, plans to continue on "World News Tonight" as much as he can after beginning chemotherapy next week.

Jennings, ABC's chief anchorman since 1983, planned to be at his desk Tuesday — a day after getting his diagnosis. A Canadian who became a U.S. citizen in 2003, the urbane Jennings dominated the ratings from the late 1980s to the mid-'90s.

A former smoker who quit several years ago, the 66-year-old anchor was too ill to work Saturday during the network's special report on Pope John Paul II's death.

Gov. Bush to Sign 'Deadly Force' Bill

TALLAHASSEE, FLA. | Gov. Jeb Bush said Tuesday he intends to sign a bill that would allow people who feel threatened — even on the street or at a baseball game — to "meet force with force" and defend themselves without fear of prosecution.

The measure passed the Florida House 94-20 on Tuesday. It had already passed the Senate.

Bush said the bill is about self-defense and called it "a good, common sense, anti-crime issue."

The measure essentially extends a right Floridians already have in their home or car. Under present law, however, people attacked anywhere else are supposed to do what they can to avoid escalating the situation and can use deadly force only after they've tried to retreat. (AP)

Bush Pushes Reforms

President keeps up campaign for changes to Social Security

PARKERSBURG, W.VA. | President Bush on Tuesday turned a file cabinet in the hills of West Virginia into his Exhibit A for why Social Security needs urgent change.

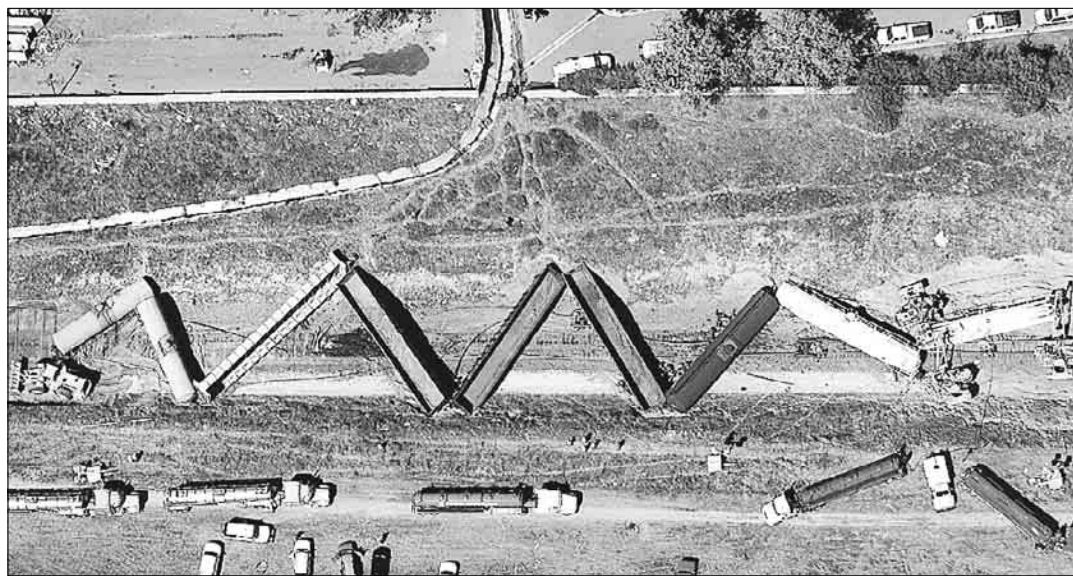

To dramatize Social Security's future solvency problem, the president peered into the cabinet inside the Bureau of Public Debt office. In it was a binder filled with pieces of paper providing physical evidence of $1.7 trillion in treasury bonds that back Social Security benefits.

"Imagine," Bush said in a speech later at West Virginia University at Parkersburg. "The retirement security for future generations is sitting in a filing cabinet."

Democrats quickly labeled Bush's trip as nothing more than a gimmicky photo-op meant to mislead Americans into thinking the program needs drastic reform.

Bush is facing an uphill battle to convince the public of the need for a Social Security overhaul, and that private retirement accounts should be part of the solution. (AP)

Study: Net Worth of Blacks Lagging

Urban League report shows large economic disparity with whites

NEW YORK | Though income and education gaps between black and white Americans have narrowed significantly, black households still have barely one-tenth the net worth of white households, according to a new National Urban League report.

Middle class blacks' tenuous hold on prosperity reflects racial discrimination in housing and other wealth-building arenas — both historically and now — and suggests that today's civil rights battles are largely economic, said Marc H. Morial, Urban League president.

"The State of Black America 2005," scheduled to be released Wednesday at a Washington news conference, comes as the Urban League also calls on Congress to assemble a commission on economic equality and advancement.

Analyzing a broad range of government statistics, the report compares life quality for blacks and whites in dozens of categories related to economics, health, education, civic participation and social justice.

Taking the whole picture into account, the report produced a measure of blacks overall well-being, which it described as barely three-fourths that of whites — a ratio that was unchanged from last year to this year. ERIN TEXEIRA (AP)

Thompson's Ashes To Be Shot From 'Gonzo' Cannon

DENVER | Hunter S. Thompson's ashes will be blasted from a cannon mounted inside a 53-foot-high sculpture of the journalist's "gonzo fist" emblem, his wife said Tuesday.

The cannon shot, planned sometime in August on the grounds of his Aspen-area home, will fulfill the writer's long-cherished wish.

"It's expensive, but worth every penny," Anita Thompson said. "I'd like to have several explosions. He loved explosions."

Thompson, 67, shot himself in the head on Feb. 20 after a long, flamboyant and hard-charging career that produced such new journalism classics as "Fear and Loathing in Las Vegas."

Hunter Thompson

The cannon shot will be part of a larger public celebration of Thompson's life.

His wife said the gonzo fist will be mounted on a 100-foot pillar, making the monument 153 feet high. It will resemble Thompson's personal symbol, a fist on an upthrust forearm, sometimes with "Gonzo" emblazoned across it. (AP)

Saul Bellow Dies at 89

Nobel laureate Saul Bellow, a master of comic melancholy who in "Herzog," "Humboldt's Gift" and other novels both championed and mourned the soul's fate in the modern world, died Tuesday. He was 89. Bellow's close friend and attorney Walter Pozen said the writer had been in declining health, but was "wonderfully sharp to the end." Bellow was the most acclaimed of a generation of Jewish writers who emerged after World War II, among them Bernard Malamud, Philip Roth and Cynthia Ozick. (AP)

Crush of Pilgrims Expected in Rome

Tribute to John Paul II may draw 4 million international visitors

ROME | A Polish college student hitchhiked for 54 hours, bouncing in the back of a lumber truck and a tractor-trailer rig hauling chocolates. A disabled German retiree rode through the night on a spine-twisting red-eye train.

Their journeys ended Tuesday at a makeshift tent city hastily erected on a wind-swept field on the outskirts of Rome. The ancient city has been coping with crowds for centuries, but now it's bracing for an unprecedented crush of up to 4 million pilgrims determined to pay tearful tribute to Pope John Paul II.

Similar camps were being thrown up on a fairground, in an unused railway building and inside a concert hall, along with hundreds of portable toilets and medical tents. A stay at the camps is free, and authorities have not said how much they are spending to set them up.

By the tens of thousands,

PAYING RESPECTS: Thousands of mourners cram the roads leading to St. Peter's Basilica in Vatican City on Tuesday.

Catholics from around the globe are streaming into the capital, fighting for taxis and squeezing into buses.

"I'm very, very tired, but I'm strong because of the pope," said Johanna Koch Mueller, 70, swinging her fists in the air like a boxer.

The retired public administrator from Munich, Germany, rode an overnight train to Rome. It was a painful journey: She suffers from severe curvature of the spine.

But missing the pope's funeral, she said, was unthinkable.

"It's my private pilgrimage," she said, clutching a sign in German that read, "Thank you, good shepherd." WILLIAM J. KOLE (AP)

Poles Pay Tribute to Native Son

WARSAW, POLAND | More than 200,000 people turned out for a farewell Mass for the Polish-born pontiff, gathering Tuesday at the square where he once rallied the nation to fight communist rule.

Poles from President Aleksander Kwasniewski to soldiers and school girls in uniform filled Pilsudski Square in Warsaw to say goodbye to a man considered a national hero.

The altar in the Warsaw square was decorated with flowers in the Polish national colors and the papal banner. Across the capital, national and papal flags with black ribbons fluttered everywhere, signs of an official period of mourning.

It was at this square that John Paul delivered a famous Mass in 1979 that is credited with giving courage to the anti-communist opposition, which formed the Solidarity movement the next year and brought about the peaceful end of communism in 1989. (AP)

OTHER DEVELOPMENTS

● DEPARTING FROM tradition, the pope was not embalmed, only "prepared" for viewing by hundreds of thousands of mourners, the Vatican said Tuesday. Vatican spokesman Joaquin Navarro-Valls did not elaborate on the procedure, but an embalmer in Rome said it appeared John Paul's remains were only touched up with cosmetics.

● MORE CARDINALS ARRIVED in Rome but Navarro-Valls said after Tuesday's meeting they had not decided on a date for the conclave at which they elect a pope, which according to church law must occur between 15 and 20 days after the pontiff's death.

● TURKISH AUTHORITIES on Tuesday turned down a request by Mehmet Ali Agca, the man who shot and seriously wounded Pope John Paul II in 1981, to leave prison and attend the pontiff's funeral, his lawyer said.

Vatican: Pope's 'Mystery' Cardinal May Be Revealed

Spokesman: Pontiff's spiritual testament may identify prelate

VATICAN CITY | The identity of a cardinal Pope John Paul II selected in 2003 but never publicly identified is still a mystery — at least for another day, the Vatican said Tuesday.

Vatican spokesman Joaquin Navarro-Valls said the pope's spiritual testament, which may include identification of the cardinal, may be opened Wednesday. He promised to reveal the name if it is mentioned.

The issue could determine the number of cardinals who will vote for John Paul's successor. The number now stands at 117.

When John Paul created new cardinals in 2003, he said he was keeping one name "in pectore," meaning "in the heart." This is a formula that has been used when the pope wants to name a cardinal in a country where the church is oppressed.

Vatican watchers have speculated that the prelate could be from China, where only a state-sanctioned church is recognized. (AP)

Bells and smoke will herald new pope

Responding to Pope John Paul II's request, the Vatican will depart from centuries-old tradition by ringing bells in addition to sending up white smoke to signal the election of his successor.

Three groups of cardinals - scrutineers, revisers, infirmarii - count the votes, check the ballots and collect some from those too ill to attend.

Each cardinal writes the name of his candidate, folds the ballot twice and carries it to the altar to drop it in an urn.

One scrutineer unfolds each, notes the name and passes to the second who does the same. Third scrutineer reads the name aloud. A two-thirds vote is required to elect the new pope.

Ballots are burned with chemicals to make the smoke black or white. If no pope is elected, black smoke appears.

White smoke and the ringing of bells will signal that a pope has been chosen.

The new pope is introduced at St. Peter's Square and imparts his first blessing.

WHO KNEW? Archbishop of Canterbury Rowan Williams confirmed Tuesday that he will attend the pope's funeral, becoming the first serving leader of the Church of England to attend a pontiff's burial. England's national church split from the Roman Catholic Church more than four centuries ago when the pope refused to annul the marriage of King Henry VIII. (AP)

Iraqis Set to Tap Kurd as President

Military reports death of 4 service members; U.S. toll now at 1,536

BAGHDAD | Ousted dictator Saddam Hussein will watch from his Baghdad jail cell as Iraq's newly elected parliament chooses a new president Wednesday, the next step in building Iraq's first democratically elected government in 50 years, Iraqi officials said.

Lawmakers put the finishing touches Tuesday on an agreement making Kurdish leader Jalal Talabani president and Shiite Adel Abdul-Mahdi and interim President Ghazi al-Yawer, a Sunni Arab, his two vice presidents.

On Thursday, the 275 lawmakers likely will name Shiite leader Ibrahim al-Jaafari prime minister, clearing the way for lawmakers to begin focusing their attention on writing a permanent constitution by their Aug. 15 deadline.

Meanwhile, the U.S. military said four service members were killed Monday and Tuesday. As of Monday, at least 1,536 members of the U.S. military have died since the war began, according to an Associated Press count.

Japanese Textbooks Spark Protests

Seoul, Beijing object to authors' handling of World War II abuses

TOKYO | Fueling an international dispute over wartime history, Japan's government on Tuesday approved a new edition of a textbook that was immediately attacked by critics who said it whitewashes Japan's World War II atrocities.

The junior high school book was among the 103 textbooks approved by the Education Ministry for use beginning April 2006.

The book was immediately assailed by critics in Japan, China and South Korea, who accused the authors of glossing over the forced wartime prostitution of thousands of Asian women by the Japanese military and other crimes.

The textbooks "contain content that justifies and glorifies wrongs committed in the past," the South Korean Embassy in Japan said in a statement. Japan colonized South Korea from 1910 until 1945, and many in the country still harbor deep resentment against Tokyo.

China's Foreign Ministry called the book "a poison for Japan's younger generations" and summoned Japan's ambassador to Beijing to voice disapproval. A Chinese trade group representing chain stores called on members to stop selling Japanese products in protest. (AP)

Greenspan: Leave Oil Prices Alone

Fed chairman says he hopes market will rein in high costs on its own

WASHINGTON | High oil and natural gas prices have put energy markets under the greatest strain in a generation, Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan said Tuesday, but he warned against interfering with market forces he hoped would stabilize prices.

Greenspan expressed a hope that higher prices would spur conservation by businesses and consumers and greater energy exploration by energy companies. That should help get prices under control, he said.

In prepared remarks for an energy conference, he said policymakers should avoid any action that would “distort or stifle the meaningful functioning of our markets.”

The Bush administration has been pushing Congress to enact energy legislation. Lawmakers in the House are working on a bill with the aim of promoting increased production of a broad range of energy sources. The measure is not expected to have much impact on the price spikes seen in recent weeks, however.

Oil prices closed at a new all-time high last week of $57.27 a barrel. They dropped sharply Tuesday in part on Greenspan’s comments and closed at $56.04 a barrel. (AP)

IS THE AIR YOU BREATHE IN YOUR HOME MAKING YOU SICK?

Your duct system functions as the respiratory system of your home. When it becomes contaminated and congested, it should be cleaned so it can 'breathe' normally and efficiently.

If you answer YES to any of the following questions, it may be time to have your air duct system professionally cleaned.

- ✓ Does anyone in the house have allergies, asthma, or other respiratory problems?
- ✓ Does anyone in your family suffer from headaches, nasal congestion, or other sinus problems at night or in the morning?
- ✓ Is there a smoker in the house?
- ✓ Do you have dogs, cats or other pets?
- ✓ Do you notice "musty" or "stale" odors when the furnace or air conditioner runs?
- ✓ Do you notice dust on your furniture shortly after cleaning?
- ✓ Does it seem like there is not enough air flow coming from your vents?
- ✓ Is your furnace equipped only with a standard throw-away fiberglass filter?

Feds Arrest 15 in MS-13 Gang Sting

Local sweep part of a nationwide crackdown on group, officials say

MCLEAN, VA. | Federal immigration agents have arrested 15 members of the MS-13 street gang this week, most of them in Northern Virginia, as part of a nationwide effort to crack down on the gang, the Bureau of Immigration and Customs Enforcement announced Tuesday.

The 15 were arrested on administrative immigration violations, and ICE will seek to have them deported, a spokesman said.

Four of the 15 were arrested in Washington, D.C., while the rest were arrested in Northern Virginia, which has been a hotbed of activity for the gang with roots in El Salvador.

Agents found a 3-foot machete under the bed of one of those arrested, Lever Alvarenga-Gamez. MS-13 gang members have wielded machetes in several recent attacks in Northern Virginia, cutting off fingers of victims in some cases.

The arrests are part of the bureau's Operation Community Shield, which began last month with the arrest of more than 100 MS-13 members nationwide.

Also this week, ICE filed immigration detainers against eight MS-13 members who were already in custody on criminal charges, including Wilfredo Montoya, an El Salvador native facing murder charges in Prince William County. (AP)

Barry's Son Reaches Plea Deal On Assault Charges

A lawyer for D.C. Council member Marion Barry's son says he's reached a plea deal to keep his client out of jail. A. Scott Bolden says

Barry

Christopher Barry was originally charged with felony assault on a police officer in February after officials responded to a noise complaint in the 700 block of 4th Street NW. According to Bolden, Barry "struggled, resisted, but didn't punch anyone." Bolden said Barry pleaded guilty to misdemeanor assault, with sentencing deferred nine months. If he stays out of trouble, the charge will be dismissed. (AP)

Pentagon Criticized in Anthrax Report

WASHINGTON | The Pentagon was too slow to inform local officials about the anthrax scare in Defense Department mail facilities last month and gave antibiotics to workers without coordinating with public health officials, an assessment of the false alarm concludes.

Moreover, the Homeland Security Department "needs to be involved earlier in such incidents," according to a summary of the report prepared under the direction of Maryland, Virginia and D.C. leaders obtained Monday by The Associated Press.

The assessment examined local and state response to the two-day, mid-March scare that prompted nearly 900 Washington-area workers to take precautionary antibiotics and invoked memories of the 2001 anthrax-by-mail attacks that killed five. It did not assess blame for the false alarm, according to an official involved with the report. (AP)

Arson Suspected In Takoma Park

WASHINGTON | The Arson Task Force was called out Tuesday to investigate whether a house fire was the work of the region's serial arsonist who has struck at least 48 times since March 8, 2003.

The home in suburban Takoma Park, Md., was gutted, but no one was hurt. Damage was estimated at $400,000. The fire's cause is still undetermined. (AP)

'Wal-Mart' Bill Advances in Md.

Senate OKs legislation forcing big businesses to finance health care

ANNAPOLIS, MD. | Legislation dubbed the "Wal-Mart bill" is advancing in the General Assembly with strong majorities that supporters say will be veto-proof — despite being blasted by Republicans as the most anti-business bill to be debated by lawmakers in 10 years.

The bill, officially titled the Fair Share Health Care Act, would require Wal-Mart to spend at least 8 percent of its payroll on health care benefits for its employees or put the difference into the state Medicaid fund. The act applies to any company with more than 10,000 workers, but so far in Maryland only Wal-Mart meets that criteria.

Gov. Robert Ehrlich has promised to veto the bill. Senators on Tuesday approved the bill 30-16, giving it one more vote than is needed for an override. In the House, lawmakers approved the bill with an 84-50 vote on Good Friday.

That's one vote short of a veto-proof majority, but supporters say they have garnered six "yes" votes from lawmakers who were absent for the long Easter weekend.

Mystery Shopper

Free People

Clarendon Commons, 2700 Clarendon Blvd., Arlington | 703-528-6718
Mon-Sat 10-8; Sun 10-6

Do you remember that girl from college, the one who went to Ren Fest, carried around a volume of Pablo Neruda and embroidered stuff on all her jeans? Well, she got a job designing clothing for Free People.

● Style: This is your one-stop shop for cheaper versions of the posthippie peasant-frilly-flouncy-frou frou styles designers are touting for spring. Even basics get a boho twist: Flip-flops ($54) have elaborate beading, and a tank's scoop neckline becomes a sequined butterfly in the back ($44). A hoodie with bold, asymmetrical embroidery ($118) calls for guts, as do some of the more aggressively creative skirts (a $78 calico number with a petticoat also features splatter-paint and fluorescent birds) — these designs are meant to be noticed. The biggest gripe: The pants and shorts are all too long. Not trendy-long — linen pants with an embroidered waistband were on the order of 18 inches too long. Many shirts are made of thin, clingy, unforgiving fabric that puts every little roll of back fat on display. Most are no-nos if you're busty, unless you want to look like a character from "Bambi Does Berkeley."

Lace ribbed tank, $38; pink wrap blouse, $64.

● Price: Skirts range from $58 to $158, tops from $32 to $98.
● Service: Within 30 seconds of picking up my first item, I had a dressing room started, and I never had to carry more than three things at once. The staff is honest, too — when I complained about the Yao Ming pants, one of the staff members confessed that they drove her crazy.

● Bonus Points: I wanted to curl up and take a nap in the dressing rooms, where the cushioned benches are smothered in throw pillows. Cute trinkets and accessories abound — cell-phone bags, crochet legwarmers, wide headbands and more.

● Bureaucracy: Full refund within 30 days with receipt and tag; store credit after 30 days.

● Bottom Line: Well worth a visit, but if you're more corporate than crochet, you may find yourself out of luck.

Can't Stop Watching

Critics say reality's addiction TV exploits vulnerable subjects

REALLY REAL | It's creepy to watch clean-cut Josh, a 20-year-old expectant father, talk about death as he shoots heroin into his foot after a month in rehab. Or to see 21-year-old Ally, an art student, overdose on drugs, or others steal from their parents, prostitute themselves, grow haggard, promise loved ones they'll quit, clean up, relapse, sob, and then, maybe, do it all over again.

Television viewers have grown used to seeing 12-steppers, sponsors and sober cops coping with inner demons. But this season, a new round of reality shows and documentaries is showing a darker face of recovery — the real one.

What they get in return is up for debate.

Last month, A&E introduced "Intervention," a reality series that stages a surprise confrontation for people battling addictions to drugs, gambling, sex or food. On April 18, HBO will premiere "Rehab," a documentary that shows the trials of five young, middle-class addicts in a San Jose, Calif., rehab camp.

The creators of these shows say they represent a force for good. The addicts get a chance to overcome their addictions and the audience gets an education.

STEVEN OZAKA/HBO, A&E

But critics contend the shows risk exploiting the addicts. They question how the sanctity of treatment can be maintained in the face of constant filming or a manipulated environment. And while the standard 12-step approach encourages addicts to submerge their egos, television feeds those egos through the attention and promise of celebrity.

John Schwarzlose, president of the Betty Ford Center, said he has turned down many producers who ask to film the daily drama. "People die of addiction every day. We're not going to make it a circus on a television show," he said.

CHANGE FOR THE BETTER? From left, addicts hoping cable TV will clean them up with HBO's "Rehab"; Anitra from the reality show "Rehab"; Alyson on A&E's already-controversial (and, some worry, ineffective) "Intervention."

But the creators argue that any effort to help is better than letting addiction take its tragic course. Even if the addicts don't kick their habits, the creators hope the negative examples will inspire others to quit, while, of course, providing enough drama to attract viewers.

Rock Blue Blood Will Tell

The daughter of the King holds her own

MUSIC | A second album is generally problematic enough. Title it "Now What" and you're almost compelling a consumer warning label: Open this disc at your own risk.

Fear not. Lisa Marie Presley's sophomore effort on Capitol Records is solid enough to prove the King's daughter is more than just a rich girl on a lark, and the strengths of her debut not a fluke. At least before it collapses under the weight of a few too many power ballads.

Presley is assisted by well-known song doctor Linda Perry, who co-writes six of the disc's 11 tracks (not counting the uncredited Ramones cover). Some of the cuts, like the standout "I'll Figure It Out," indicate Presley spent a lot of time with Cure records in the 1980s. The arrangements are clever and skillfully cover the deficiencies in her voice. Her personal history and the burbling electronica also lend the cover of Don Henley's "Dirty Laundry" a real legitimacy.

There's not much happening after the first half of this disc, when Perry brings a punch-the-clock mentality to the collaboration. By then, turn to the liner notes for entertainment value. Pink stopped by to add some vocals. Presley recalls, "I fell in love with you the minute we connected. I believe it was at around 4 a.m. one night, drunk on the floor barking at each other."

HOW COME 'LIVE FOR GMA' DIDN'T WIN? "Today" show watchers will soon wake up to a new voice — country music star Phil Vassar singing its theme song. The morning show chose to replace its old tune with his "Live for Today."

Gotta Have Faith

R&B singer Faith Evans took four years to shed the drama

RETURNS | At one point, Faith Evans' weekly routine in Atlanta consisted of "driving to Target, picking up the kids from school and working out." That is no longer the case.

Evans is in the midst of a seven-city promotional tour for her new album, "The First Lady." Though the April 5 release is her fourth album, it is her first album in four years.

Despite such successes as her platinum-selling 1995 debut "Faith" and several subsequent hit R&B singles, worldwide appeal is the one brass ring that has eluded Evans' grasp.

"I don't mean to downplay my past success," Evans said. "I've been a part of some strong records; I know I have a fan base. But just like with basketball, you want to win more [championship] rings."

Evans' forthrightness burns

brightly throughout "The First Lady." It is a candidness borne of significant ups and downs. The latter includes the 1997 murder of B.I.G. and the 2004 arrest of Evans and her husband/manager Todd Russaw for drug possession.

Then there is her svelte figure, which sparked rumors that her slim-ness was due to something other than exercise.

"There are always going to be detractors," Evans said with a laugh. "But I worked hard for three years in the gym to achieve this physique."

That stop-the-detractors-in-their-tracks sentiment is the cornerstone of the retro-leaning lead single "Again." On it, Evans addresses last year's drama: "And the media tried to say/I had a habit I couldn't manage/And I'm throwing my life away/But everything ain't what it seems/Just because it's on TV."

Evans added, "I definitely have a more forthright approach. Not in terms of just the speculation but honest in terms of feelings. The songs certainly reflect my life, even if I experienced something as a teenager. It's not all just based on the here and now." GAIL MITCHELL (BILLBOARD)

Faith Evans will be at Fur Night Club, 33 Patterson St. NE; with Brooke Valentine, Thu., April 7, doors open at 6 p.m., $15; groovetickets.com.

'JAG' Gives Final Salute This Month

LAST SHOW | The television military drama series "JAG," which mixed real war and conflict with fiction, is ending after a 10-year run. The final episode will air at 9 p.m. April 29, CBS announced Monday.

Canceled after a single season on NBC, the show was picked up by CBS and became a reliable ratings performer and part of the network's turnaround, said CBS Chairman Leslie Moonves. But its ratings had begun to ebb.

"We've had an amazing run, particularly for a series that was once canceled," show creator Donald P. Bellisario. (AP)

The stars of "JAG" are moving on.

Flogging Molly keeps true to its Irish and its punk-rock roots

GENRE-BLENDING | The phrase "alternative punk" might sound like an oxymoron. But as long-running L.A. band Flogging Molly barnstorms through its shows armed with accordion, mandolin, tin whistles, banjo, acoustic guitars — instrumentation that seems more befitting an Irish folk band — it makes sense.

That's because Molly's head folk is Dave King, a Dublin native who grew up steeped in traditional Irish music but also with a strong affinity for musical mavericks who transcend genre limitations.

"To me, Johnny Cash is punk," King, 43, said. "To me, the Dubliners are punk, even though they use traditional instrumentation."

In fact, King said the first two albums he owned were Cash's landmark "At Folsom Prison" album

IRISH ACCENTS: The seven-piece Flogging Molly maintains a common touch by connecting with the audience at its incendiary, and frequent, live performances.

from 1968 and the Dubliners' "Finnegan Wakes," a live album recorded in 1966.

King realizes those recordings played a crucial role in Flogging Molly's supercharged concerts: "We are a live band," he said.

Where some musicians aspire to a larger-than-life model of rock stardom, Molly prides itself on remaining on a par with its fans: "I think people see the band as an extension of themselves. There's no pretension," he said.

The birth of the band, which also includes multi-instrumentalist Bridget Regan, guitarist Dennis Casey, accordionist Matt Hensley, bassist Nathen Maxwell, mandolinist-banjo player Robert Schmidt and drummer George Schwindt, represented something of a homecoming for King. He started out playing in hard-rock bands, eschewing both the American country music loved by his father, and punk rock because it seemed to him that "it was mostly rich kids who were into it."

One day in L.A. he heard Regan playing Irish music on fiddle and something clicked.

"I realized that I had come to America to figure out how to get back to Ireland." RANDY LEWIS (LOS ANGELES TIMES)

Joining her in the bottom three were Anwar Robinson and Nadia Turner, the two most capable performers of the lot. And absent from the firing squad was Anthony Fedorov. When asked what parts of young Anthony's performance he didn't enjoy, the caustic Simon Cowell suggested, "the beginning, middle and end." But Fedorov's non-threatening image may end up outweighing his musical mediocrity and carry him into the final five.

If you've got real talent and showmanship, do you really want to win "American Idol"? Look at Ruben Studdard. Two years ago he was America's velvet teddy bear, a sultry but safe soul balladeer. Tonight he has to don a silly suit and do a cameo on "Life on a Stick" (9:30 p.m., Fox), one of the worst new sitcoms in recent memory.

Nadia is surely one of the most talented and confident performers on "Idol." But I'm not sure if I want her to suffer Ruben's fate. KEVIN MCDONOUGH (UNITED FEATURE SYNDICATE)

RFK Undergoes Soccer Makeover

Changeovers provide unique challenge for United and Nationals

WASHINGTON | The pitcher's mound, weighing nearly 10 tons, disappeared into the ground about an hour after Sunday's exhibition game between the Washington Nationals and the New York Mets, signaling the start of the Great Changeover.

A few minutes later, a man was lifted into the basket of a frontloader so he could start disassembling the outfield fence.

By Monday, the infield dirt was gone and 35 sections of stands had been moved along a set of rails in the outfield. By Tuesday, there were still kinks to work out. The Nationals' batting tunnel, for instance, suddenly needs a new roof because of a miscalculation.

In a unique setup to placate both Major League Baseball and Major League Soccer, crews are working furiously to convert RFK Stadium from a ballpark to a soccer pitch so D.C. United can play home games Wednesday and Saturday. Next week, they'll have to change the field back for the Nationals' home opener April 14.

Back and forth. Back and forth. About 20 changeovers will have to happen this season, costing an estimated $40,000 for each one-way conversion.

"Once we step on the field and see that it's really a good field and we're not going to get hurt, we're going to be fine," United forward Jaime Moreno said. "Until then, we're going to have a little bit of doubt."

The Nationals are just as antsy. The field looked good and felt good Sunday, but players pointed out that they will have to relearn the feel of the infield — how ground balls will bounce or hop — each time the dirt is replaced.

"This is not done by any other baseball team, and I am real hopeful that this works for all the parties," Nationals president Tony Tavares said. "There's tons of concerns."

United Ready for Early Test Against Mexicans

UNITED | D.C. United begins its RFK Stadium schedule tonight against Mexican power Pumas UNAM in a match that would be a tough ticket at most arenas around the world.

The reigning champions of the region's biggest leagues open a two-game semifinal series with continental bragging rights and a possible berth in December's inaugural world club championship on the line.

But because CONCACAF (the organization that governs soccer for North and Central America and the Caribbean) has done such a poor job organizing and promoting its club championship — there is little to no television or marketing and the event was skipped in 2001 — the tournament does not have nearly the same cache as its counterparts around the world.

Still, D.C. United, CONCACAF's first American champion (1998), is taking tonight's game seriously.

"This game provides yet another chance for our team and league to gain the respect of the region and to make a name for ourselves," said United midfielder Ben Olsen.

American teams have fared poorly in the competition the past few years, in part because it takes place so early in the Major League Soccer season (UNAM is 10 games into its campaign) because domestic clubs seem to have so much difficulty competing south of the border. That makes tonight's result all the more important, as United travels to Mexico City next Wednesday for the series finale. BRIAN STRAUS

Nationals Aim for First Win

Team gets a day off after losing inaugural game to the Phillies

NATIONALS | Now the Washington Nationals want Win No. 1.

Relieved to be done with Game No. 1 in team history, they can concentrate on doing their jobs in the 1½ weeks until all the hoopla returns for their home opener.

The players had Tuesday off, and it was a chance to rest after five games across five cities in five days. That stretch included the Nationals' first game — albeit an exhibition — at their new home, RFK Stadium, and their first regular-season game, an 8-4 loss at the Philadelphia Phillies on Monday.

The team knows it's important not to stumble out of the gate too much. Not only are the first nine games on the road, but they also all come against fellow NL East members Philadelphia, Florida and Atlanta — three of the four teams that finished ahead of the Montreal Expos last season.

"You always want to get off to a good start. Opening on the road against division rivals, you really want to get off to a good start," manager Frank Robinson said. "We can get buried real quick."

House Committee Sends Letters to Sports Leagues

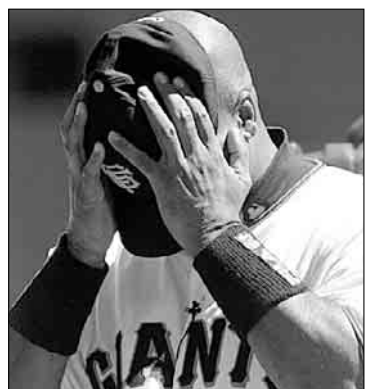

Congressmen looking into steroids in sports sent letters Tuesday to the heads of the NBA, NHL and five other groups asking for information about their drug-testing policies. The House Government Reform Committee sent a similar request to the NFL last week. Bonds: 'I Will Be Back'

Barry Bonds received a 1-minute standing ovation from the sellout crowd and emphatically declared "I will be back!" when introduced before the Giants' opener Tuesday — which they won 4-2 over the Dodgers.

Becky Zerlentes, left, seen during a Golden Gloves boxing match against Heather Schmitz on Saturday, died from complications from a hit received during the fight.

Heavy Blow for Women's Boxing

Zerlentes becomes first female to die as result of in-ring injury

BOXING | It was the kind of blow that occurs thousands of times in boxing matches across the country: In the third round of a women's bout, Becky Zerlentes took a shot to the head above her left eye, then staggered forward and fell to the canvas.

Only this time, Zerlentes never regained consciousness and died, becoming the first female boxer to die in a sanctioned event.

The death stunned those who knew Zerlentes, a 34-year-old college instructor remembered as a fun-loving, adventurous person who had a particular fondness for sports.

"She was the Energizer Bunny of our campus," said Mary Croissant, who taught with Zerlentes at Front Range Community College. She had a smile and a light in her heart that touched everyone she came in contact with."

The last death at a USA Boxing event came in February 2001, when heavyweight Quinton Grier died of a heart ailment after a match. Juan Silva III was the last fighter to die as result of in-ring injuries in May 2000.

Overall, boxing ranks eighth in fatality rates for all sports — 1.3 deaths per 100,000 competitors, according to the Johns Hopkins Medical Institute.

It's still unclear what happened to Zerlentes in her match against Heather Schmitz. Autopsy results are still pending and Denver police said Tuesday no charges are likely.

Jamison Returns from Knee Injury

WIZARDS | Washington Wizards forward Antawn Jamison, activated from the injured list Tuesday, was in the starting lineup against the Boston Celtics.

The All-Star missed his first game in nearly 5 years on March 8 when he sat out against the New York Knicks because of tendinitis in his right knee, ending the NBA's longest active consecutive-games streak at 386.

Jamison, who missed 11 straight games and 12 of 14, was averaging 19.6 points and a team-high 7.8 rebounds when he went on the injured list.

"I feel up to the task," Jamison said before the game. "I'm playing without any pain. I need to play some games before we get to the playoffs." (AP)

North Carolina Returns Home as NCAA Champs

Tar Heels expected to lose several players to NBA after title victory

COLLEGE HOOPS | With thousands of Carolina blue-clad fans cheering in the Smith Center, Rashad McCants rested his left arm on the NCAA championship trophy and gave it a glance.

The North Carolina junior then looked up at the crowd and smiled. He didn't have to say a word.

The Tar Heels returned home Tuesday to celebrate the program's fourth national title with about 15,000 frenzied fans — less than 24 hours after closing the season with a 75-70 win over Illinois.

Several of the players talked of returning for a similar party next year, though it's unclear just how many will be around. In addition to losing seniors Jackie Manuel, Jawad Williams and Melvin Scott, Williams said that he expected McCants to enter this year's NBA draft. In addition, juniors Sean May — the Most Outstanding Player of the Final Four — and Raymond Felton, and freshman reserve Marvin Williams are weighing a possible jump to the pros. (AP)

Hooray for Small

Lexus GS series for '06 tosses a nice bone to its V-6 model

ROAD TEST | Considering the state of oil supplies and misery at the pump, it may seem Lexus is out of touch with its 2006 rubber-boiling GS sedans. Lexus plans to hybridize all its offerings, but it's debatable whether that will save much gasoline. But the GS-series has a fuel-saving strategy perhaps as important — an incentivized smaller engine.

Typically, smaller-engine models lack desirable features — luxuries that have nothing to do with performance. The motive: to get buyers to choose the pricier car, even if they don't need the bigger engine.

The GS has two engines: GS300 with a V-6 and GS430 with a V-8. Both have gorgeous standard features; the GS430 has adaptive/variable suspension and a system that brings the car's handling systems and electronic throttle, e-brake and e-steering under computer control. But only the GS300 has an all-wheel-drive option, and, given the choice of that or gizmonic handling, take AWD and consider better fuel economy as a net-plus.

It's unusual for the more fuel-efficient, less-powerful car to be as tempting as the V-8 variety. Hopefully it will be a trend.

Future Generations.

*Be a Part of this Important
Medical Research Study*

A major outbreak of life-threatening anthrax would not just impact how we live today—it would change the lives of generations to come. To combat the threat of anthrax in the past, a vaccine has been used.

Now local doctors are conducting a medical research study to evaluate an investigational, second-generation vaccine for the prevention of anthrax.

You may qualify if you are:

- 18–55 years of age, and
- Currently in good health

Qualified participants will receive a study-related medical evaluation and study vaccine at no cost. Participants will not be exposed to anthrax as part of this study. Reimbursement for time and travel will be provided.

Colleges, universities hope super-gyms get students in the doors

Dominic Mann's wasn't sure if he wanted to attend the University of Akron until he saw the school's expansive new $40 million recreation center, with its basketball gym and weight equipment — even a rock-climbing wall. "It made a difference," the 19-year-old freshman said as he shot hoops at the center.

Colleges nationwide are touting their recreation centers, or plans for one, to prospective students in hopes of standing out during the application process. According to the National Intramural-Recreational Sports Association, 333 of 700 colleges and universities are building or expanding recreation centers, or plan to soon.

ly include basketball courts, swimming pools, running tracks and, in recent years, rock-climbing walls, specialized training, nearly limitless weight equipment, Internet connections and late-night hours.

Indiana University said an independent student survey showed 87 percent of its students were involved in some recreational sports activity. Seventy-nine percent said it was important to their campus experience, said Kathy Bayless, director of campus recreational sports.

The culture change on campus can be dramatic with a new recreation center. The University of Michigan just completed $4 million in upgrades to its four recreation centers. At the center that got the most improvements, visitors increased 66 percent to 45,000 in January compared to January 2004.

"I've definitely met more people" since the Akron center opened in August, said Peter Ipnar, 21, sweaty from a workout on the rock-climbing wall. THOMAS J. SHEERAN (AP)

ANDREA BONIOR, PH.D.

Tough Cookies

I'm having a problem with eating when I'm not hungry. When I'm feeling at all stressed, I need junk food like an alcoholic needs a drink. When I'm tired, a cookie. Sad, need another cookie. When I'm sitting around the house, I eat to avoid housework and just to eat. I've always been heavy, and I'm fully aware that I'm doing this, yet I can't get myself to stop. Any advice?

—COMPULSIVE SNACKER, D.C.

Realizing you turn to food as an emotional crutch and identifying which emotions most hasten your dash to the Oreos were great first steps. But to truly change, you must learn to substitute healthier ways to care for yourself. Bubble baths, taking a walk, deep breathing, meditation, music, aromatherapy, journaling, calling a friend. The options are endless and should be personalized to you. So you feel X? You recognize it, take a time-out, and do Y — no trans-fats involved.

You'll do even better if you give a homefield advantage to health. Toss the junk and replace it with distracting treats such as anti-stress toys, brain-candy magazines, scented body lotions, chewing gum, flavored water and other oral-fixation soothers that won't break the calorie bank. Baby carrots, anyone?

My admitted messiness is causing serious problems in my two-year-old marriage. I try my best to keep the house neat, but now that we have a new baby it's getting even harder. My husband takes it personally, saying I'm very hard to live with. I feel like there are many qualities about him I wish I could change — like his forgetfulness — but I accept that he is who he is. At what point does my messiness fall into that category? —NON-NEATNIK, TOWSON

Wow. Take already being untidy, add a new baby and guilt that you're "hard to live with" to the mix, and I'm impressed you were able to dig your way to the computer. Compromise isn't just for Congress; it's great for marriages, too. Maybe he cleans more while you diaper more; he hires a maid if you cut down on manicures; you de-clutter for 15 extra minutes a day while he writes stuff down instead of letting it get lost in his head. Try moderate, mutual changes — no need to rewire yourself into Stepford Wifehood.

'Marriage' Ads Depressing

IF METRO IS trying to increase its ridership, then maybe it should not accept advertisements that insult or depress about half its riders. A "Marriage Works" poster at Gallery Place/Chinatown proclaims, "Married People Make More Money." Is the ad suggesting that we should go out and marry for financial gain? That's certainly the beginning of a healthy relationship. Why should we have to look at these every day on our commute? I don't enjoy channeling Bridget Jones at an awkward dinner party on my way to work, thank you very much.

Correction:

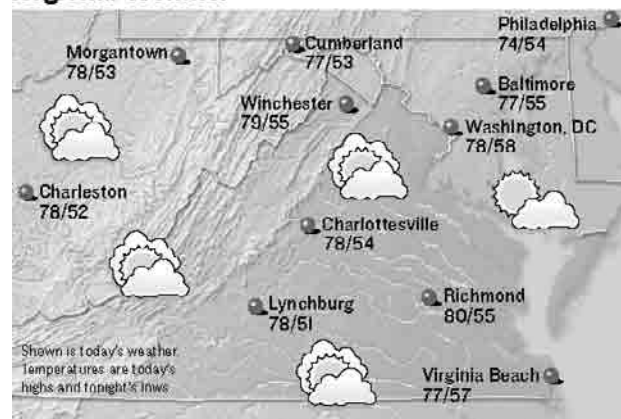

Page 18 of Monday's Express incorrectly listed the title of one of Pope John Paul II's books. The correct title is "Crossing the Threshold of Hope."

PAIN

Hurt Martha, Hurt the Economy

In a follow-up filing Monday to a request by MARTHA STEWART that a judge reduce her time under house arrest, her company's CEO and lawyers insisted that Stewart's incarceration affected far more than her personal comfort. CEO and president

Susan Lyne said: "Martha Stewart Living Omnimedia made a decision that it would be beneficial to expose our brand, our products, and our mission, to a broader demographic and in the process, to reintroduce Ms. Stewart's services on the fourth edition of 'The Apprentice.'" (AP)

'Sopranos' Guy in Trouble

VINCENT PASTORE, who played a gangster in "The Sopranos," was ordered by a New York judge Tuesday to stay away from the girlfriend he's accused of beating over the weekend. The judge told Pastore, 58, to refrain from writing, e-mailing, calling or trying to see Lisa Regina, 44, whom he allegedly assaulted in his car Saturday. Pastore's lawyer said his client was pleading not guilty to the four misdemeanors with which he's charged. (AP)

A Commendable Move

Rapper C-MURDER, in jail after a murder conviction in the 2002 killing of a teenager, has changed his stage name because he thinks he's been misunderstood. "I am not a murderer," the rapper, whose real name is Corey Miller, said in a statement released Tuesday. He will now go by C MILLER, said his publicist. Miller's statement said people had misinterpreted the C-Murder name, which he intended as a reflection of his upbringing in one of New Orleans' most violent housing projects. Miller was convicted of second-degree murder Sept. 30, 2003, in the death of a fan who was shot inside a nightclub in the New Orleans suburb of Harvey. (AP)

RIP-OFFS

Trump Gets Jealous, Starts Ripping Things Off People

Roc-A-Fella Records CEO DAMON DASH will play the Donald Trump role in "The Ultimate Hustler," a "hip-hop version of the 'The Apprentice,'" BET announced. When a contestant is eliminated, Dash will rip a Roc-A-Fella gold chain off his or her neck, reported E! Online. In what's now a very familiar formula, would-be business people will compete for a powerful man's approval. The show is slated to debut in late 2005. (EXPRESS)

Document Everything, Just in Case

BRITNEY SPEARS and husband KEVIN FEDERLINE will star in a UPN reality series that documents their courtship, engagement and wedding. Featuring "exclusive, never-before-seen private home videos" of their "personal love story," the six-episode series is scheduled to premiere later this year. It picks up shortly after the pair met in Los Angeles and headed to Europe on tour, where Federline performed as a backup dancer for Spears. (AP)

Horoscope

By Stella Wilder

ARIES (March 21-April 19) A personal, emotional assignment may come up and it is worthy of your whole-hearted commitment. Be innovative, experimental.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Resist the urge to be impulsive. There are certain rules you must follow before your imagination can truly take wing.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Take the time to reach those certain family members with whom you haven't spoken in some time. There is some news you need to catch up on.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Get involved in the activities of the little ones in your life and they, certainly, are looking forward to your tutorage.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Embrace the ordinary, even in the most routine, mundane affairs you can find some enlightenment and excitement. Take a fresh look.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Your sense of timing will be essential, as you make a decision involving love. You can make sense of that which seems confusing.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Reassess your financial situation; future issues are coming to a head. Planning can pay off handsomely in the days to come.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) Social activities are likely to accelerate; be ready to jump right in and accept the invitations that come your way.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) Try very hard not to be impatient with someone who is trying, despite all appearances, to help you. He or she is on your side.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You don't want to do anything casually or skim over the surface of things. You're in the mood for some in-depth exploration.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Others are likely to look to you for guidance, but you may have to dig yourself out of a personal hole of sorts before you can offer it.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) You may feel as though you're just one step behind the crowd and you may well be. It's up to you, and only you, to get going.

WASHINGTON

February 14, 2005

I send greetings to those gathered for FOSE 2005.

The important work of government employees continues to strengthen our Nation, and technological advancements are helping to ensure that we meet the needs of taxpayers. As a comprehensive trade show, FOSE brings together leaders from government and technology. By offering demonstrations of the latest innovations, educational programs, and networking opportunities, this event helps enhance the efficiency, security, and effectiveness of our government.

I applaud those attending FOSE 2005 for your dedication to excellence in serving the American people. Your spirit of professionalism and commitment reflects the best of our Nation.

Laura joins me in sending our best wishes.

Welcome to FOSE 2005!

PostNewsweek Tech Media is proud to welcome you to FOSE 2005! As the technology community gathers at the Washington D.C. Convention Center this year, leaders within government and industry will converge upon thousands of new products, hear visionary keynoters and along the way share best practices at hundreds of special events taking place throughout FOSE. There are 92 new companies amongst nearly 500 exhibitors at FOSE this year showcasing innovative technology you haven't seen before. This year you will also find expanded government-to-government pavilions where military and civilian agency personnel demonstrate the best technology and processes implementations available necessary to solve today's defense, homeland security, and electronic service delivery issues.

Whether you are among the federal civilian, military, or state and local government professional community, FOSE 2005 is your number one resource for cutting-edge technology, comprehensive education, networking opportunities, and knowledge required to meet your organization's mission critical needs, in an all-inclusive, three-day event.

While we at FOSE remain focused on the present, we are committed to the future. If you are charged with securing your organization's networks, managing human capital, enterprise application development, IT consolidation, or hundreds of other demanding challenges, FOSE 2005, unites government and industry to discuss the strategies and techniques needed to deliver on the technology promise.

Inside you will find information, times, and locations for:

■ HEAR The informative keynote addresses from the

CEO's of INTEL, DELL, Accenture and SAP America

■ VISIT The DoD Pavilion & Center and to see the 36 companies and 10 project presentations by government and military colleagues with proven records in deploying these new technologies in the defense of our great nation

■ LISTEN to The WAMU Computer Guys, John Gilroy and Tom Piwowar,, listen as they take a humorous yet insightful look at the latest computer industry developments and answer computer questions live from FOSE Tuesday morning

■ PARTICIPATING in any of the 100+ FREE educational sessions ranging from the Business Case for Linux, to GSA Advantage, from Maximizing Federal Opportunities to Using Technology to Transform Government - FOSE is the place to enhance your professional development

■ EXPLORING the over 120 new products being unveiled at FOSE from nearly 500 exhibitors

With all of these features, plus many exciting new components, FOSE 2005 is where you will find answers to your most pressing Technology challenges.

Sincerely,

*Group Chief Executive — Government
Accenture*

Forces such as the need for greater flexibility to develop and deliver services and to focus more on the needs of citizens and their service experience have been propelling governments toward a new future. Far beyond e-government, CRM, or any individual tool, future high-performance governments will adopt various innovative technologies and operational models to accommodate their respective political structures, citizen expectations, socio-economic conditions and geographic realities. In his address, Marty Cole, chief executive of Accenture's Government operating group, will discuss findings from Accenture's latest research on how governments around the world are meeting the needs of citizens while remaining efficient and cost effective. He also will discuss the implications of a future of unprecedented collaboration among governments at the local, regional, and national levels, in which they will develop, manage, and deliver services together to meet the needs of citizens in a seamless manner.

Federal Leadership Council Briefings

Federal Leadership Councils

The Federal CIO Council, the Federal CFO Council, the Chief Acquisition Officers Council, and the Chief Human Capital Officers Council will present detailed developments on their strategic initiatives.

WEDNESDAY, April 6, 2005

2:00 pm – 2:45 pm

E-Town Theater

Booth 1439

CIO Council Report

What did we start out to do? What are we doing now? And how will we know that we've got it done? Hear from Council leaders as they provide an interim report on current CIO Council activities and this year's strategic plan.

Speakers: Dan Matthews, Vice Chair, CIO Council

CIO, Department of Transportation

Karen Evans, Chair, CIO Council, Administrator E-Government and Information Technology

2:00 pm – 2:45 pm

Homeland Security Center Theater

Booth 1439

Report on Homeland Security

Steve Cooper, DHS CIO, will review the progress of DHS IT initiatives and describe major accomplishments having to do with enterprise architecture, enterprise solutions, infrastructure management, and security. He will discuss today's IT challenges in these areas and the Departments plans for continuing to address them during the coming year and beyond. Speaker: Steve Cooper, Chief Information Officer, Department of Homeland Security

CXO Report - Improving Performance through Enhanced CXO Collaboration

This panel of Federal leaders will discuss the challenges and issues of collaboration among leaders in the Federal environment. As solutions for high-performing government organizations become more complex, there is an increased requirement for collaboration between the CFO, CIO, and Chief Procurement Officer. Often these arise from the need to drive financial and performance improvements using technology solutions developed and supported by contract with private sector partners. The panelists will discuss these challenges; the barriers to successful collaboration and strategies for overcoming them; and will highlight lessons-learned from both positive and negative experiences in C-Suite collaboration.

Speakers: Samuel Mok, Chief Financial Officer, Department of Labor and other members of the CFO Council

Rosa Parkes, Chief Information Officer, Department of Energy

Mike Sade, Director and Procurement Executive, Department of Commerce

3:00 pm – 3:45 pm

Chief Acquisition Officers Council Report

Agency acquisition activities continue to be a increasingly critical element of agency operations. The Service Acquisition Reform Act (SARA) has provided additional emphasis and focus on improving the acquisition system at the federal level. Chief Acquisition Officers were put in place at each of the agencies covered by the act. The Chief Acquisition Officers Council has been focusing on

- what is needed for the acquisition workforce to succeed in the future and how those needs can be provided for;
- implementing several key components of the integrated acquisition environment, impacting both business and government;
- completing additional efforts to provide support to the workforce in competitive sourcing, and
- addressing small business utilization issues.

The Council also has been working on other issues to improve the integrity and effectiveness of the acquisition system.

Speakers: Glenn Perry, Department of Education, Vice Chair, Chief Acquisition Officers Council

Thomas S. Luedtke, Assistant Administrator for Procurement, NASA, Human Capital Workgroup Chair

Scott Cameron, Deputy Assistant Secretary Department of Interior, Competitive Sourcing Workgroup Chair

Sean Moss, Director, Office of Small and Disadvantaged Business Utilization, Department of Transportation, Small Business Workgroup Chair

Representatives of the Office of Federal Procurement Policy, OMB

Chief Human Capital Officers Council Report

As the Chief Human Capital Officers Council approaches its second anniversary this spring, Executive Director Michael Dovilla of OPM will moderate a panel of Chief Human Capital Officers from a cross-section of Federal agencies. CHCOs will talk about their agencies' ongoing efforts to implement the Strategic Management of Human Capital initiative of the President's Management Agenda as well as CHCO Council priorities for 2005.

Speakers: Michael D. Dovilla, Executive Director, Chief Human Capital Officers Council, U.S. Office of Personnel Management

Gail Lovelace, Chief People Officer, General Services Administration

The Linux Pavilion & Theater is a new exhibition providing government agencies with a look at forward-thinking companies such as IBM, Novell, Dell, MySQL & Penguin Computing, who provide Linux Solutions specifically for the government sector. During FOSE, companies will be available to discuss specific Linux Solutions relevant to the government and will be presenting product demonstrations in the Linux Pavilion Theater.

CASE STUDY: The State of Nebraska Lowers Taxpayers' Costs with SUSE LINUX

The State of Nebraska had challenges: ensure secure access to online resources, improve availability of state services and lower taxpayer cost. Nebraska wanted to eliminate the inherent productivity loss of having to regularly reboot servers, and the State needed to improve the stability of mission-critical legacy applications. Add to the stability, productivity and cost challenges the impending retirement of many of its UNIX IT support staff, and it was clear that Nebraska needed to set a new course and follow it. Learn more about the State of Nebraska's challenges, how they solved them with identity management and SUSE LINUX solutions from Novell and what results they're seeing.

Session Moderator: Larry Rosenshein, Principal Strategist for State & Local Government, Novell

11:15am - 12:00pm

CASE STUDY: Government Agency Lowers IT Costs through Intelligent Infrastructure Consolidation

A government agency will be highlighted to demonstrate their comprehensive approach to system consolidation that spans technology, organization, and business dimensions, and that leverages the many advantages of Linux and open source. They will detail out the costs and benefits of implementing a Linux Solution. They will demonstrate how they achieved ROI for both their IT departments and the organization as a whole. They will discuss the business problem, how they chose vendors, migration best practices and Total Cost of Ownership.

Session Moderator: Gary Coppeler, Dell Regional Manager, FED Classified/Intelligence Team

2:00pm - 2:45pm

CASE STUDIES: How Linux Plays a Role in the Changing Government Security Landscape

Over 10 case studies will be presented in a discussion about the ever changing face of global public sector security in the fact of new threats, regulations and policies and look at where and how Secure Linux fits into the picture. An explanation of why these agencies decided to implement a solution based on Linux, which providers they analyzed and selected, what their biggest implementation and migration challenges were, and the business case for implementing these solutions will be presented.

Session Moderators: Mary Ann Fisher, IBM Global Government Industry and John M. Weathersby, Jr., Executive Director, Open Source Software Institute

3:00pm - 3:45pm

Panel Discussion (CASE STUDIES) - The Business Case for Linux - Real Solutions for Real Business Problems plus Security & Open Source Software Q&A

Most CIO's, IS/IT directors and financial executives in the government sector are focused on gaining competitive advantage and improving total cost of ownership (TCO). However, in today's economy, they are forced to create a business case justification to support IT investments. This session will be presented in the context of an end-user case study and will provide an overview of what it takes to build a solid business case and quantify many of the possible cost reductions that can result from adopting Linux.

Speakers include:

Matt Jacobs, Vice President, Penguin Computing, will present Sandia National Laboratory Combustion Research Facility, U.S. Department of Energy

Kerry Ancheta, Vice President Account Management, MySQL will present Pottawattamie County, in southwestern Iowa

Terry Bollinger, The Mitre Corporation, will be on hand to answer questions regarding Security & Open Source Software.

Achieving lower IT costs through Dell's Scalable Enterprise

The proliferation of x86 servers performing an ever increasing amount of the critical IT workloads has led to challenges in IT infrastructures. Our discussion will center around Dell's Scalable Enterprise strategy and methods for introducing system consolidation, manageability, virtualization, and maximizing performance through Linux technologies.

Session Moderator: Kevin Noreen, Dell

11:00am - 11:30am

Open Source, Open Government: A Match Made in Heaven?

Greater access, transparency, open processes: these are the hallmarks of open government today. In strikingly similar fashion the open source movement - with Linux as its flag bearer - is all about open, flexible, cost effective systems that break the hold of proprietary alternatives and offer greater choice and flexibility. But what would seem like a natural blend of two powerful trends has been relatively slow to gel. Why are government agencies wary of adopting open source? Which ones are having success? Who are the trend setters? Join us as we share information and perspectives on this provocative topic.

Session Moderator: Basil Harris, Jr. - Director, Linux Solutions Marketing, Novell

11:30am - 12:00pm

Data Warehousing with Linux® Clusters

Clusters of Linux servers are proven for delivering high performance at a low cost using "commodity" hardware. This presentation provides insights into large scale data warehousing with Linux clusters and includes examples from real world deployments in the government sector. It also discusses how DB2 Integrated Cluster Environment® is changing the economics of business intelligence.

Session Moderator: Boris Bialek, IBM, Senior Manager, Competitive Technologies

2:00pm - 2:30pm

Linux Migration - having your cake and eating it too.

The price/performance of Linux clustering is hard to ignore - it's been the driving force in the transition from proprietary SMP systems to open standards, commodity infrastructures. But there is a hidden cost that lies in the complexity of managing a cluster. Is it possible to have your cake and eat it? This talk will use customer examples to illustrate how many government organizations have achieved migration nirvana.

Session Moderator: Matt Jacobs, Vice President, Penguin Computing

2:30pm - 3:00pm

The LAMP stack - What's it all about?

This presentation will provide an overview of MySQL and it's current offering of high performance, database servers and tools. It will highlight the LAMP stack and how enterprises have a total solution for web applications, by leveraging this best-of-breed projects Linux, Apache, MySQL, and either PHP, Perl or Python.

Session Moderator: Mark Rubin, Senior Account Manager, MySQL

3:00pm - 3:30pm

Finding Real Value with Linux and IBM Intel-based servers

IBM eServer xSeries and BladeCenter provide innovative hardware server solutions for your Linux applications. Come to this presentation to hear all about IBM 64-bit Intel® Xeon™-based servers and the broad range of IBM x86 server offerings. Learn how you can use xSeries for a cost effective, secure and reliable Linux environment to drive key business applications such as SAP, Peoplesoft, DB2® -- and many others. We'll talk about success stories with xSeries and BladeCenter - customers finding real value with Linux and IBM Intel-based servers.

Session Moderator: Amy Freeman, IBM xSeries Linux® Market Management

The Promise of e-Government

Location: Conference Room 153

Station: WFED AM 1050

This panel discussion provides a strategic look at how top-level CIOs and CTOs can use technology options, such as IT consolidation, to fuel and fund other initiatives from mandated E-Gov to internal departmental projects. We tap the experience of CIOs and CTOs managing IT policy at major federal agencies for their lessons learned and best practices on such topics as:

- technology's role in consolidation
- security and consolidation
- dealing with cultural change

WMAL

Location: Booth 2650

Join 630 WMAL at the Radio Booth/Stage on April 6th throughout the day for a series of presentations on the latest military technology, with a primary focus on medical care.

Armed forces medical experts will demonstrate and discuss advances that are saving lives and speeding recuperation from the front lines to military hospitals here in the U.S. As part of the program, representatives of The Fisher House Foundation will take you inside their operation, which supports wounded military personnel and their families by providing a range of support services, including temporary housing that allows family members to be near a loved one while they recover.
